

Aroused by her Cocker spaniel Boots, shortly after midnight last Thursday, Mrs. Norman Smith was able to escape with her two children, Patricia, four, and Penny, six months, from her apartment over the Peach Dairy Bar, Main Street East, which had broken into flames and was blazing furiously. "The dog definitely saved our lives," Mrs. Smith said. "A few minutes later and we would never have got out unless firemen had taken us from a window. As it was, the smoke was choking and I had to go right past the part that was burning." Mrs. Smith and her two lovely children were given accommodation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold White.-This lovely photo was taken by the Hamilton Spectator's Seven Star News Photographer, E. Council Meeting - Council-Jor Bartlett Reports That Both Water Accounts Will Be In Good Shape By End Of Year - Wants Cheaper Water.

Water was again the big question at the regular monthly meeting of the North Grimsby council on Monday night. Several residents from the east end of the township were present and asked some very pertinent questions which were all answered by members of the councli, apparently satisfactorily, as the residents did not press their questioning too strenuously.

Councillor Bartlett in answer to to question stated that the east end water system in 1947 had a total revenue of over $6,000 and that the Town of Grimsby was paid for water supplied every three

DIFFERENCE IN FALLS

Styles change in accidents, as well as in clothes.

This is shown in the 1948 edition of "Accident Facts," statistical yearbook published by the National Safety Council.

The figures show falls were the commonest type of fatal accident 35 years ago, with railroad accidents running second.

Last year, motor vehicle accidents topped the list, falls were in second place and railroad accidents had dropped far back down the list.

Here are the major types of fatal accidents in 1913 and in 1947, as shown in "Accident Facts." They are listed with the worst killers first, and on down the scale.

3. Drowning 4. Burns and scalds

FOR BETTER HIGHWAY SIGNS

The Ontario Department of Highways is putting up a fine new type of road sign for motorists, and commendations are in order.

These new signs are made of waterproofed, glass-impregnated cloth which clings tightly to the metal sign on which it is placed by vacuum process. At night they stand out with great brilliance in the glare of automobile headlights.

Familiar glass button-type signs and finger boards on our highways are to be ditched; the first because of vandalism (a universal ailment that seems incurable) and the latter because they caused motorists to slow down to read directions and thus invite collision .

Readability is indeed the first requirement of a good road sign, and the department's decision to keep to a maximum of four words is a wise one.

OUR TIMBER RESOURCES

The pulp and paper industry and the lumber industry are the two largest users of primary forest products in Ontario.

They are dependent directly upon the forests of Ontario for their continued oper-

In Ontario over ninety per cent of the forest wealth belongs to the people, the residents and taxpayers of the Province.

The Department of Lands and Forests, through its Division of Timber Management, functions as the trustee of the people of Ontario to assure that these forests are kept productive and the timber properly utilized. so that these and other wood-using industries are maintained and expanded to the producing capacity of Ontario forests.

The direct return to the Treasury of the Province of Ontario through the sale of forest products on Crown Lands is large, but the indirect revenue exceeds this many times over. Indirect revenue is expressed in terms. of employment and wages of men in the harvesting and processing of sawlogs, pulpwood and other forest products, the return to capital investment and the purchase of equipment and supplies.

Two great Ontario industries are dependent on the forest for their principal raw materials-the pulp and paper industry and the lumber industry.

The capital investment in pulp and paper mills in Ontario reaches a huge total, and many thousands of people are employed. The gross value of the products of these mills represents a major portion of the total value of the products of all manufacturing industries in the Province.

The lumber industry in Ontario is concerned with the manufacture of sawn lumber of all dimensions, shingles, sawn ties, veneers, etc., and the numerous mills give employment to thousands of people.

The huge pulp and paper and lumber industries are not the only ones which depend on the forest, however. There are a great number of other industries in which wood and paper are the chief, or at least important, components. In fact, there is practically no industrial activity which is not dependent to some extent, directly or indirectly, on the use of forest products; there is no doubt, whatever, that forest management in Ontario is "big business."

A resource of such importance in Ontario economy requires intelligent administration in order that the best interests of the Province as a whole may be served.

Until the people of Ontario come to appreciate what their own forests mean to them, it may not be expected that forest management principles will be applied to the extent which will bring about their full potentials. Wise and full use is predicated on public forest consciousness.

TELLS HOW ADVERTISING WORKS

"The Advertising Business" is the title of the last Monthly Letter to be released to the public by The Royal Bank of Canada. In its familiar essay form, the Letter tells what the advertising business is all about, shows how it benefits the community and the economy, raises the standards of living and contributes to the stabilization of industry and employment.

Here are a few excerpts: "One of the first positive rules is that advertising is an investment, not a speculation. . . Advertising is fruitless if the advertiser does not offer something which will genuinely serve some human want. . . The third rule is not to expect overwhelming returns in the way of sales from the first ad or two. Advertising does not work that way. It deposits in the mental storehouse of the prospect impression after impression until he has a well-defined picture of the product and the service it will perform for him.

"And, last but not least in this small list of principles, the business executive is headed for disappointment if he satisfied his ego merely by matching the competitor's advertising appropriation dollar for dollar, or even by topping it. Not the size of the appropriation, but the quality of advertising is important. Every campaign should be tailored to the needs and to show off the advantages of the particular business concern. A follow-myleader campaign is an evidence of lack of originality and initiative."

In speaking of "blatancy and exaggeration" in advertising, the Royal Bank comments, "Sometimes and with some people, exaggeration pays. We live in an age of exaggerations and on a continent where exaggeration is as natural as breathing. The time when it doesn't pay is when it runs over into misstatement about quality; deceit as to the service the commodity will give, and illusion about economy. There is harmless exaggeration such as every one of us uses every day to gain attention, but no advertiser can afford to base a sale on exaggeration of the basic worthwhileness of his goods.

"Most instances which come to attention are of over-emphasis on a selling point, and this is pretty generally discounted by people who know that the advertiser is putting his best foot forward."

In outlining only one of the problems besetting the integrity of advertising men the article reads, "Or all the classes of business men who have sincerely attempted to work out standards of business conduct, the advertising men have had the hardest problem. On the one hand, they have many kinds of employers, some of whom are short-sighted when dealing with the public; one the other hand, advertising men are dealing with many credulous reonle who leap at everything new. and swallow the most outrageous claims without making a face. Between these two. it is no wonder that some advertising went astrav, and that those who would improve the ethical concepts of the business found themselves with a difficult task."

The endorsation of "The Advertising Business" by The Royal Bank of Canada is an appreciative gesture toward a profession which indirectly contributes to the welfare of all Canadian banks.

"WE GIVE SERVICE"

Time was when people did their own plumbing, electrical work, carpentry, stone work and so on. But today we depend more and more on specialists whose main function is to know well their own sector of the working world and to be prepared at a moment's notice for emergency action.

As Wellington Jeffers, financial editor of The Globe & Mail, Toronto, pointed out the other cay, in his widely read daily column, "Finance at Large": "This specialization makes necessary in modern morality a feeling of responsibility for the good of all. Each man in a complex economy is like a soldier at his post. That should never be lacking in an emergency. That should be as much a part of union psychology and morality as of employers'.

I do not know anything which would sell union organization to the community as a whole better than for us all to recognize 'determination never to let the community down.' Life would mean more to all of us if we acted like a doctor in an isolated district who never refuses a call to a patient or a telephone girl staying on the job during a flood or fire.

It should be as much a matter of pride with each individual and group that the flow of materials should not slacken in industry and trade so far as he and they are concerned and that 'we give service.' Actually, a general pride of that kind would settle most 'problems,' end inflation and make money and living more worth while.

"All this should be true of employers as of employees, of civil servants as of those engaged in private enterprise, of producers as of distributors and of artisans as well as of artists and professional men."

The way to do things is to begin.

A Housing-Raising In Africa

I had admired the mud structures I had seen on the old plantation, but it was not until I had lived in Buapwa and had seen the jungle and river with Sahda's eyes that I realized the noble beauty of native houses. One has to see them in the changing atmosphere, which is like a matrix, holding in it the houses, and the jungle surrounding them and the river sliding past. . . .

In the heat of the midday the houses appear faded and dry as though they were about to become powder under the calcinating blasts of the sun. By late afternoon the blends of earth colors in the walls are rich and deep, and traces of green can be seen in the straw-tans of the roof thatch. Later, the cooking fires send up plumes of slate-blue smoke, bannering the sky. The people moving about the fires are lustrous black and all the village has the soft delicate texturing of evening.

After having seen and felt and smelled the setting, the forest and the river and the old houses of the village in their many, ever changing aspects, I was ready to watch the exciting event of Quay-Quay's new house mushrooming its fresh erect stalk and cap into the sky. He had bought a cow for the big festivity and Sahda was busy supervising preparations for the feast.

A stake was driven into the earth at the point which would be the center of their house. A string of twisted raffia was tied to the stake. At the other end of the string was a pointed stick. Quay-Quay walked in a circle, keeping the string taut, and scratched the circle where the walls would rise. All the people watched this silently. It had the dignity and formality of the laying of a corner-

Then with a yell of "Ai-i-i-i!" the men dispersed in groups, some to bring in the rattan which had already been cut in the jungle, some to cut the thick logs for the doorways, some to cut the more slender upright sticks, some to bring the long, thin roof poles, others to get the thatch. The small boys brought the twigs, which were to be laced on to the upright poles in a wattle to hold the mud plaster. Women and children carried baskets on their heads to get the clay for plastering from a great termite mound on the edge of the village.

The upright poles were driven into the ground alon, the scratched surface until the circle was a stockade. The space for the piazza was marked off inside the circle; it did not protrude beyond. The little twigs were laid horizontal and bent to the circle of uprights being tied securely with rattan at every intersection. Ceiling poles were laid across the top of the structure at wide intervals, and then a thick bundle of twigs, called a "collar," was tied around the top. On this the roof would rest. The long roof poles lay like the ribs of a half-opened umbrella from the tall mastlike center pole of the house. Twigs were bent and tied in ever larger circles onto the roof poles. The men stood on the scaffolding of poles, winding their toes around them, and bending low, quickly tied the knots and yanked them secure. . .

The bundles of glistening still-green thatch were tied into the intersections of twigs with poles deeply overlapping each layer. The completed roof was several inches thick and impervious to the pounding of the sun's rays and rain.

The stems of the top thatch were caught up in a wrapped bundle at the very peak of the house, cresting it with a cylindrical top-

While the thatching was progressing, the boys were trampling termite clay for "plaster" with their bare feet. . . .

The clay was firmly wedged between each stick until it was a solid wall. A good house is rubbed many times. For the final coat a special clay is used which is found by digging deep pits in the earth. Sometimes it is pink, sometimes a golden ocher, sometimes a gray-white. Much care is used in rubbing this final layer and the hands are moved in patterns that are rounded sweeps, while drums beat the rhythm.

The door was cut in one piece from the breastbonelike edge of a tree buttress. After several of these fibre-matted oblongs of wood are taken from a big buttress, the tree has a jack-o-lantern look of missing teeth.

Quay-Quay would paint a colored clay mural on the outside after the house was completely dry .- From "New Song in a Strange Land." by Esther Warner, in Christian Science Monitor.

It is more like a watermelon than a cucumber. It is 12 inches long and 11 inches in circumferance. It's your turn, Red.

Provincial Constable Teddy Hope pulled a smart stunt at the Peach Bar fire. He placed his patrol car in the centre of the street facing west, just east of Depot street and let the red flasher signal on the roof work continuously. This stopped all eastbound traffic from running over the fire lines and detoured them down Depot. Westbound traffic was not hindered as there were no hose lines across the street east of Oak street and cars and trucks went up Oak.

Mogg's two rows of potatoes received their annual cultivation last Friday. Explanation. When the old H. G. & B. Electric Railway ceased to operate it was decided not to tear the rails on Main Street up. In order to cover them the Department of Highways put down a tarvia top over each strip of rail from the top of Palmer's Hill to the easterly limits of the town. Constant traffic wears this top off and consequently each year it has to be renewed. When the first covering was put on it just resembled two long raised strips running down the centre of the street and some facetious wag called them "Mogg's two rows of potatoes." Mogg at that time being Reeve of the Town.

Questions and Answers

Miss D. S., Winnipeg: If a guest invited to a wedding does not send a gift until after the wedding, a short note should be dispatched with it, explaining the delay.

Q. Do men always remove their hats while talking to a woman

A. Etiquette says they do but common sense shows this is not always practical. On a below-zero day or in a heavy snow or rain storm, it would be wiser to tip or lift the hat and then put it back on the head. A thoughtful, courteous woman would not permit a man to sand bareheaded under conditions which might endanger his health.

ROBERT H. SAUNDERS, C.B.E., R.C.

The demand for electricity from all classes of the community - homes, farms and industries - all over Ontario, is still mounting. Dear Fellow Citizens: Homes are being built, the demand for increased production from farms nomes are being built, the demand for increased production from farms is steadily increasing and industry is pressing forward with plans for expansion, plans that mean greater production and more jobs to keep

It is anticipated that the increase in demand over the available supply will amount to in excess of four million kilowatt hours per day, and conservation measures have been put into effect as of Tuesday, September 14th. These will include reductions in the supply for show windows, office lighting and certain industries, banning outdoor electrical signs and in other ways. Even with all these reductions we will still be short 1,200,000 kilowatt hours per day but to insist on more would have a hampering effect on industry

Where then can we get the vitally needed power? From you and seriously reduce employment. and every individual Hydro user in Ontario. How much should you save? Take a 60-watt electric lamp as an example. For every 24 hours it burns, it requires almost one and a half kilowatt hours of current. If every one of the 900,000 Hydro users in Ontario will save the equivalent of that much electricity every day there will be no need

Everyone must do his or her part. It should be a 24 hour effort. Turn off every light, switch off every motor or appliance the moment it is not needed. Particularly, watch the switches on your

The situation is critical. Full employment must be maintained and the support of every householder, every commercial user and every industrial consumer is essential in avoiding the waste of Toka Mandus electricity.

A FUR STOLE FOR ANY SEASON

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Seven rows of handsome silver bluemink pelts make this luxurious stole, one to get you up elegantly for summer night breezes and air-cooled dinner roofs, orto top your cool weather cloth coats for day or night doings.

This strange and moonlit shade of mink, a natural color, not dyed, is wonderful with a tanned complexion, and is one gray fur which enhances rather thanfades or discolors smartly coiffed gray hair, in combination. In this stole style it is a particularly good resort fur, north or south, too.

The sub-committee of the O.A.S.A. meeting in Oshawa on Sunday found that there had not been sufficient evidence submitted to substantiate the charge of "pushing the umpire," a charge which was laid against Smithville coach Lorne Shrum. Shrum was allowed to participate actively after the third game of the series with Mt. Hope on Monday night. No reason was given why he could not take up his coaching duties for this third and most important con-

Catcher Doug Lane, who allegedly signed two certificates will be suspended until the first of January, after that date he may again participate in O.A.S.A. softball.

Manager Fred Book, coach Lorne Shrum, Johnny Belcot and Don Fisher all attended the Oshawa meeting. No mention was made of the sworn affidavits of Shrum and Fisher, which were forwarded to O.A.S.A. secretary Frank Feaver. It is understood that umpire Herb Moore of St. Catharines forwarded a strongly worded letter to headquarters. However in view of all evidence submitted, Shrum is back and all Smithville is happy again.

Frank Gnup is having his troubles with his Hamilton Wildcats. Injuries have cut his squad down to the extent that it is difficult to even run through a dummy signal drill. Frank expressed disastisfaction also with the efforts of his American imports, who have not been giving their all for the dear old Wildcats. When the Cats stepped up into the Big Four they made quite a step, and its too late to retreat at this time. The Tigers meanwhile look like a powerhouse in the O.R.F.U. and may draw the crowd over if the Wildcats are not a winning club. It was ever thus, the winning team draws the

BEAMSVILLE BOWLER WINS ONTARIO TROPHY

(By BLONDIE GALE)

Jack Knowles, of Beamsville, three-time winner of the Provincial Bowling Association Singles Trophy, further demonstrated his skill as a lawn bowler by capturing the Ontario Singles Championship at Hamilton on Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Knowles, who won the Provincial Bowling Association Championship in the years 1938, 1939 and 1946, won the Ontario Crown this year by defeating Mr. Elliot of Oshawa, in the final game by a score of 21 to 12, although at one time in this game he trailed by a score of 12

At only one other time was the Beamsville man in difficulty, this being in the semi-final round when be was losing 12 to 4. However, he braced up and came back to run out, not letting his opponent score another shot.

This was the first time Knowles had ever entered this tournament and he is to be congratulated on winning the meet as it features some of the hottest Lawn Bowlers in Ontario. In the other four games of the two-day meet, he never had more than five points score against him by an opponent.

For winning the championship Knowles received a blazer with a crest on it indicating his position ar Ontario Singles Champion. In addition to this he was given an all-expenses-paid trip to the Dominion Singles Tournament if and when this is held this year. There is some doubt as to whether or not this meet will be held this year to select an all-Canada Champion. If it is we will pick Knowles for the winner, for he will certainly be out there trying to capture this Norse adventurers reached Labtrophy and bring the honour it rador 500 years before Columbus carries with it back to the West made his discovery of America. Johnny Belcot must have had his mind on that home run ball he threw to Gordie Oakes in the ninth inning of the first game, when Mt.
